

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Let's help the victims of natural disasters!

Learning Outcome

Analyze issues relating to different topics and their solution in written and spoken situations according to work and social contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about geography, climate and environmental problems.
- I can report facts about events or actions using words like whatever, whoever and whichever.

Ask your partner:

- What kind of help do natural disaster victims usually need?
- If you could help victims of natural disasters how would you help them?

Let's Explore!

Please help the victims of hurricanes!

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Victims of natural disasters rely heavily on help from disaster relief organizations for which a range of supplies and support are provided by the public. The victims are grateful for whatever is made available. Whoever has the inclination to give their time or material will have the satisfaction of knowing they helped.

How can you help?

Take a tip from Joan Hazelton, a hurricane survivor.

"When I used to make donations to the needy, I quickly searched the house for things we no longer needed. I never thought of buying something new. But when our own family became the victims of a hurricane, you bless whoever it was that gives you new things. We were stunned by their sense of caring."

A Helping Hand is a charity to which you can give your help, time or money. However, there are certain items that are more in demand than others. One volunteer said, "We had far too much clothing, for example, and not nearly enough diapers, blankets, and – odd as it sounds – toothpaste. If you want to help the victims in the hurricane zone, rely on the people at A Helping Hand to make sure whatever your donation is, it is a meaningful one." It is essential to know whatever is in short supply. At this point, medical supplies and protein-rich food are needed so whichever you choose to give will be used. Donations of clothing and tents are no longer required as there was a huge response to those who needed those items last week.

Volunteer doctors, nurses and social workers who have flown in from various parts of the country to help are taking care of people whose lives have been threatened by infection or disease. At this point, we are looking for long-distance help and hoping you will respond. Whatever donations you give are crucial to us as they save lives. You might be happy to know we will give you a tax receipt for your kind monetary donations.

Let's Practice!

Sam is into charities. He looks for information about them.

Instructions: Underline all the prepositions and relative pronouns in relative clauses. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. A Helping Hand is a charity to which you can give your help, time or money.
2. Donations of clothing and tents are no longer required as there was a huge response to those who needed those items last week.
3. Volunteer doctors, nurses and social workers who have flown in from various parts of the country to help are taking care of people whose lives have been threatened by infection or disease.
4. Victims of natural disasters rely heavily on help from disaster relief organizations for which a range of supplies and support are provided by the public.
5. The organization with which Joan Hazelton is involved is looking for donations.

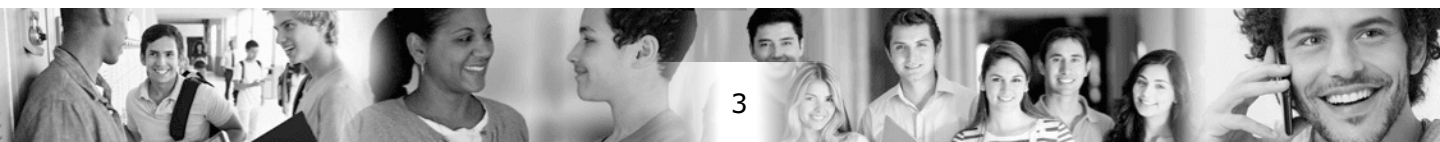

Let's Practice!

Sam encourages people to participate in charity efforts.

Instructions: Complete the sentences with the words provided. Use capital letters where necessary.

whichever whatever for whatever whoever
whoever

1. The victims are grateful _____ is made available. _____ has the inclination to give their time or material will have the satisfaction of knowing they helped.
2. But when your own family are the victims of a hurricane, you bless _____ it was that gives you new things.
3. At this point, medical supplies and protein-rich food are needed, so _____ you choose to give will be used.
4. Make sure _____ your donation is, it is a meaningful one.

Extension Activity

Invent your own charitable organization.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Choose whichever natural disaster is most relevant or important to you.
- Create a name and a mission statement for your organization.
- Write a 150-word paragraph describing the types of donations and support your organization offers/needs.
- Present your mission statement and convince other people to volunteer or donate to your organization.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I create a charitable organization.

☐ ☐

I write a mission statement.

☐ ☐

I write about facts about events or actions.

☐ ☐

I use whatever, whichever, and whoever where possible.

☐ ☐

I speak about events or actions.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- heavily (adverb): to a great degree
e.g. Victims of natural disasters rely heavily on help from disaster relief organizations for which a range of supplies and support are provided by the public.
- grateful (adjective): thankful
e.g. The victims are grateful for whatever is made available.
- inclination (noun): desire e.g. Whoever has the inclination to give their time or material will have the satisfaction of knowing they helped.
- stunned (adjective): very surprised
e.g. We were stunned by their sense of caring.
- zone (noun): area
e.g. If you want to help the victims in the hurricane zone, rely on the people at A Helping Hand to make sure whatever your donation is, it is a meaningful one.
- in short supply (expression): having less than what is required e.g. It is essential to know whatever is in short supply.
- protein-rich (adjective): containing high levels of protein
e.g. At this point, medical supplies and protein-rich food are needed, so whichever you choose to give will be used.
- diapers (noun): material wrapped around a baby's bottom and between its legs to absorb and retain bodily waste e.g. We had far too much clothing, for example, and not nearly enough diapers, blankets, and – odd as it sounds – toothpaste.

Learning Points

Relative Clauses: Whatever, Whoever and Whichever

You use relative clauses to define the noun that precedes it. It adds more detail and makes your writing or speech more sophisticated.

You use some clauses beginning with whatever, whoever and whichever to talk about people or things that are indefinite or unknown.

Whatever means anything or it doesn't really matter.

Whoever means the person or group who/ any person or group.

Whichever means one thing or person from a limited number.

For example:

I'm sure I'll enjoy eating whatever you make.

Whoever wins will go on to play Spain in the final.*

Whichever one of you broke the vase will have to replace it.*

Examples:

- If you want to help the victims in the hurricane zone, rely on the people at A Helping Hand to make sure whatever your donation is, it is a meaningful one.
- You bless whoever it was that gives you new things.
- At this point, medical supplies and protein-rich food are are needed, so whichever you choose to give will be used.

